MASSES FOR THE WEEK

My Dear Friends in Christ,

My journey to priesthood was, to say the least, a circuitous one. I can remember the first time anyone inquired about my entering the priesthood; it was my pastor, and I literally laughed in the man's face. Not a scornful laugh, but an incredulous one (for which I quickly apologized when I realized he was serious!). I couldn't understand why he thought I would be a good priest. Over the course of the next six months, two other folks (my great-aunt, a Sister of the Blessed Sacrament, and my high school chaplain (a diocesan priest)) asked me that very same question. It was then that I understood what Eli and Samuel went through. God's call to Samuel was at first misunderstood and misappropriated (to Eli), but then with Eli's help Samuel was able to answer God in the manner which was appropriate.

When we think of vocations, we invariably think of priesthood or religious life, which is fair enough I suppose. They are both pretty "high profile" ways of living out one's faith. We do a disservice to God's call to each of us, however, if we limit our thinking to just those two ways of life. Each of us has a vocation, a "call" (which is what the word "vocation" means) from God to fulfill our baptismal promises which, while made by our parents are lived out by us. For most, it means living "secular" lives by gospel (and not worldly) values remaining true to God in word and deed. For some, it means living a professed life consecrating themselves to God in a unique, singular way by means of vows or promises. For all, it means opening up one's heart to the call of God by putting Him first in our lives.

In today's gospel, Jesus offers an invitation to the two disciples of John. After they inquire as to where He is staying, Jesus invites them to "come and see" (Jn 1:39). This simple, yet profound invitation comes with the implication that they (and others) lives' will be changed. This change takes place in the heart, for our lives of faith in Jesus are movements of the heart. We can debate, discuss and deliberate, but what it comes down to is the gift of discernment. We must look within our hearts to see who it is God is calling us to be. For each of us (even those living similar lives), it will be different. Not all priests are the same; not all married couples are the same; not all single men and women are the same. This is a good thing, for it points out the unique nature of our vocation. It is something which is, ultimately, between us and God. It is not something someone else can discern or live – it is for us, and us alone, to do.

May we have the courage to look within our hearts to see who it is God is calling us to be. May we know that in this call we are fulfilling our baptismal call. May we be open to anything the Lord asks of us, even our very lives. May the call of God, imprinted on our hearts at baptism, be lived out with courage each and every day.

Have a Blessed Week,

Fr. Paul

Adult Confirmation Classes

Classes will be beginning soon for any adult who has not received the Sacrament of Confirmation but is looking to do so. Please contact Matt Brady for more information.

January Teen Mass

Our next Teen Mass is January 28th at the 6:15 Mass. There will be contemporary music and Fr. Paul will make his homily relevant to the life of our young people.

We also invite any of our teens who would like to do a reading or bring up the gifts to do so. If your teen wants to do one of these things, please contact Matt Brady.

Journey from Grief to Healing

You are invited to come for sharing and healing in a prayerful small group setting. Mary, Queen of Martyr's Parish Grief and Loss Support group begins on Tuesday evenings February 6th through April 9th from 6:30PM to 8PM at St. Kateri Church.

The group will meet once per week for 9 sessions. The facilitators of the group are Meredith Scott and Betty Whittaker. Please call Kathy Benton parish administrator to register: 508-866-4000 ext.401

MY FRANCISCAN JOURNEY

Today's readings are about how one is invited by God to fulfill one's baptismal call. In the first reading, Samuel mistakenly believes that it is Eli who is calling him when in reality it is God. In the gospel, the "call" comes by way of invitation by Jesus to "come and...see" (John 1:39) where it is that He is staying. In both of these cases, the invitation calls the respective listener to make a radical departure from one's current state in life and move into another state of life in service to God. Like Samuel, St. Francis' initial "call" was somewhat misinterpreted, as St. Francis thought the call by God (to "rebuild my church") was a literal one when in reality it was more of a spiritual one.

Particularly dear to Francis was an ancient chapel long allowed virtually to fall into ruins, dedicated to San Damiano. In it hung a Byzantine wooden crucifix, painted in red, gold, and blue. It did not represent the tortured Christ of later art; but the large, open, dark eyes of the Crucified looked down with a haunting vividness. It was a striking example of the early painted crucifixes, and it is strange that it should have survived the neglect of the chapel. Before it, Francis loved to pray for the light which would shine through the darkness of his mind. As he looked up one day, he saw the lips of the Christ move, and he heard the words, "Francis, you see that my house is falling down; go and repair it for me." And Francis answered simply, "Willingly, Lord."

How far Francis was from any notion of purifying or reforming the Church is clear from his reaction. His literal mind understood the words in their most literal sense. He was in a crumbling church, and God was simply asking him to repair it. His thoughts must have flashed back to his boyhood when he had learned the technique of building walls around his hometown. The overpowering thing for him at that moment was that Christ — above all, the majestic, yet so human, figure of the Crucified in brilliant colors surrounded by saints — had spoken to him. He had obscurely known and heard God's voice within him before, and it had given him the strength to kiss the leper. But in Francis's mind, there was a whole world of difference between inner promptings, however certain, and what in daylight one could see, hear, and touch. Here at last was the authentic confirmation that God was with him, instructing him about what here and now he should do. Others of different makeup might not need this outward sign. Francis, of all people, did.

Whether God calls one to a figurative or literal "rebuilding" of one's life and situation, may we all be open to being called by God to something new, something different, something radically unique to us. In this way, may God's call to us take root in us so that we may know God, serve God, and love God and all God's people whom we meet.

Pax et Bonum,

Fr. Paul, OFS

Civil Rights Day

In Catholic social tradition, "rights" correspond to the treatment every person deserves not because of background or individual merit, but by virtue of being created in the image and likeness of God. As followers of Christ, we are called to a concern for our brothers and sisters. This means that, in acknowledging rights, we also acknowledge responsibilities.

St. John Paul II writes, "every man is his 'brother's keeper', because God entrusts us to one another" ("Evangelium Vitae," 19). In our complicated world, it can be easy to get overwhelmed by public policy. However, we are not exempt from engaging in public life. Today, we remember that we are all called to work to ensure that social structures uphold human dignity and support true human flourishing. LPi
